Craig Steinbeisser was born and raised on the family farm and ranch in Sidney, Montana. After graduating high school in his hometown, he attended North Dakota State University, receiving an Associate's degree in farm and ranch management in 1984.

Craig never had any doubts about returning home to continue the family farm and ranch (VS, Inc.) and to raise a family of his own.

Craig's family's farm began from humble beginnings when in the 1930's his grandparents purchased and cleared acreage along the Yellowstone River south of Sidney. Craig is not afraid of new ventures or hard work. He's helped grow this multi-generational operation to what it is today; several acres of irrigated ground where VS, Inc. grows sugar beets, corn for feed, alfalfa, wheat and soybeans. VS, Inc. also has dry land crops, pasture ground, a herd of mother cows and feedlots where they feed up to 5,000 head of cattle annually. In 2017 Craig and his business partners diversified their operation even more by purchasing several pieces of commercial real estate across Montana.

Apart from the blessings of seeing his son grow up, Craig also involves himself in the community. He has served on several commodity boards, the US Potato board, the Sugar Beet Growers' board, and is currently on the Sidney Public Schools board.
