Samer grew up in Amman, Jordan. After graduating from De La Salle Catholic School, he attended Jordan University, where he received a BSc in electrical engineering. Samer worked in the private and public sector and consulted for the United Nations Development Program. In 1993 Samer and his wife and daughter moved to Columbus, Ohio where he attended the Ohio State University and acquired a MSc in Industrial and systems engineering. After working for Allied Machine and Engineering in Dover, Ohio and Saber Diamond tools in Hilliard, Ohio, Samer spent the next 11 years working for GE Superabrasives where he assumed several roles, from manufacturing to quality management. In 2005, while at GE, he completed an executive MBA. Samer is fluent in Arabic and English and French. In 2004 while working at GE Superabrasives, Samer acquired his Six Sigma Quality Black Belt certification, and executed several projects utilizing his newly acquired skills.

In 2009, Samer established his consulting business “Superabrasives Consultants, LLC”. He has had business dealings in China since 2009, primarily, in the man-made diamond industry that serves Oil and Gas exploration. Samer took advantage of his frequent visits to China to network and develop partnerships and explore business opportunities. Since 2016, he has been working with his friend and business partner Sean Yuan to supply US engineered filtration systems (Made by Columbus Industries) to the automotive and high-speed train factories in China.

Samer has a strong technical and Quality background; he is an inventor of over 20 patents in the man-made diamond and firearm industries. Working in China has gained him significant experience in international business. Samer is always on the lookout for business opportunities in China. Exporting US beef to China presents considerable prospects. The US is the world’s largest beef producer. At the same time, the Chinese middle class continues to grow along with their appetite for US products, especially edibles. In 2016, Samer, started US Prime Beef Exporters, who is working closely with Montana Dakota Beef to export beef and other US products to China. Samer is involved in several business ventures in China and is experienced with doing business in the People’s Republic of China.
